

WARG BEATS

#	Description	Notes
1	We see an older man telling a gathered group of children a tale about men fighting warg beasts; one of the men looks like one of our main characters.
2	“Daughter” sees her father returning home runs over to greet him.
3	We see a beast in the woods with a scar, string down the fenced off village.
	Title Card
4	It’s daytime now as Sköll prepares to head out again after the beast that got away. His daughter wishes to come with him. He tells her no.
5	Daughter follows anyway, climbing the high fence surrounding the village
6	We follow Sköll as he tracks the beast finding and following tracks. We also follow his daughter as she looks for him, following his trail. She sees two sets of tracks.
7	The tracks end and warg ambushes Sköll; they tumble down the hill/small cliff. Daughter is following the trail reaches the end of the footprints, but hears the fighting in the distance, follows the sound.
8	As Sköll and the warg are fighting, we see the daughter in the woods beside them still searching for her father. We see Sköll and warg running past trees. Daughter sees a unfamiliar man run by trees.	May not need this part
9	The warg has Sköll cornered but Sköll manages a serious blow, knocking the warg to the ground. It clearly lost the fight
10	With the warg still breathing, Sköll raise his spear for the final blow just as his daughter enters the clearing
11	Daughter has a horrified look and screams no, running up to her father and yanking on his sleeve
12	Daughter is seeing a man but her father is not
13	When Sköll insists on slaying the beast, Daughter pulls of the fur and shoves it into Sköll's hands.
14	Sköll examines the fur then looks back to the “beast”  he sees a man, startled by what he's seeing. (that simple or too simple?)  Sköll takes his daughter an leaves the beast (man).	Does Sköll see a man? Is he too afraid to fully see the man? Is he just confused and uncomfortable with the implications?
15	The injured man comes to and pushes to his feet, catching sight of two green wargs (an adult and a pup) leaving the area.
